DRAFT

Tree Selection for Planting at Town Hall

We are looking to plant one tree to fill this space (see below) and to meet the Tree City Application requirement for this year. I spoke with Andy Crosset, the town arborist, showed him the photos of the spot for the future tree and asked for recommendations on trees that are:

- Native to the area
- Takes into consideration climate change & town canopy
- Medium-sized tree when fully grown
- A tree with seasonal interest and/or flowering may be interesting to consider

Here are 4 trees Andy suggested (I removed the Garry Oak as it seemed too big):

Cascara

- This small native tree boasts small flowers and purple fruit that feed many native birds. While it's frequently overlooked, it's a highly adaptable tree that will work well in a woodland setting or in a smaller yard. Its foliage turns brilliant yellow in autumn.
- Deciduous tree that has dark green, oval-shaped leaves with prominent veins that turn yellow in the fall
- It is a fairly slow grower and maxes out around 25'.
- Cascara trees are resistant to many pests

Pacific Dogwood

- Pacific dogwood is a deciduous tree growing up to 20 meters tall (66 feet) with a smooth dark bark. Leaves are oval, pointed at the tip, 4-10 cm (1.6-3.9 inches) long, deep green in color, and have parallel veins.
- Creamy white flowers with a greenish center that bloom in the spring and sometimes again in the fall
- The main disease is anthracnose, which is caused by a foliar fungus that causes leaf spotting and defoliation

Mountain Hemlock

- Some consider the Mountain Hemlock to be the best native conifer for a small garden since it's an attractive medium sized evergreen tree.
- Very slow grower
- A medium-sized needled, coniferous, evergreen tree that has a narrow width but can mature to heights of 30 to 100 feet. It has a conical or pyramidal crown, dense foliage, spreading branches, and the leading shoot may be tilted. The bark is grayish-black to reddish-brown and is fissured and scaly.

Native (Western) Larch

- Larch trees are large, deciduous coniferous trees
- They have thick, scaly, cinnamon-colored bark, and their needles are pale green and stiff
- In the fall, larch trees turn a striking yellow-amber color, and then drop their needles for the winter.
- Since it is a deciduous conifer, residents might mistakenly believe the tree is dead when it loses its needles. It can also get pretty tall, 100' range. It has striking fall color though
